On May 29, 2013, contact was made with the defendant with regard to her change in residence. Ms. Almaguer advised her mother had kicked her out of the home on or about May 17, 2013, due to personal issues and said she did not report the change of address because she was homeless at the time.

On May 30, 2013, the defendant reported to the U.S. Probation Office for the purpose of providing a urinalysis test. During the collection process, the defendant was caught using a device which was taped to her torso in an attempt to provide a negative test. The makeshift device contained a liquid which appeared to be urine. When confronted, Ms. Almaguer admitted the device contained someone else's urine, which she was going to try to pass off as her own. The defendant stated the reason she used the device was because she had recently used marijuana and Vicodin and knew that her urinalysis would test positive. Ms. Almaguer indicated she started using marijuana in April 2013, and has been using the substance on a weekly basis. With regard to the use of Vicodin, she advised she started using the medication this month and had ingested approximately 10 pills to date.
